INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

This list has been prepared in response to requests from parents for help in the selection of books for their children.

The italic letters before the titles show the ages for which the books are suited: a means under 8 years; b, 8 to 14; c, over 14.

The classification of books according to the age of the child is an arbitrary method at best, since children differ so greatly in their ability to grasp literature. Many books will, therefore, be found in one list which some parents will feel could be read only by older children. But in many homes, fortunately, the custom of reading aloud to children has been observed from earliest childhood. Where this is so, and the child develops a love of books, it is surprising to note the readiness with which he will grasp the best literature.

A child had always better have a book which is above his comprehension than one which is too young for him, and gives his reason, imagination, or sympathy no exercise.

Though some "popular" literature finds its place on this list, the committee hopes that parents will select for their children's reading, as far as possible, such books as are of some permanent value, and are as interesting to the adults as to the child.

Teachers and parents who have access to public libraries should call upon librarians for further help when it is needed. Many excellent lists are prepared by the different libraries and are obtainable at little or no cost.

So many books in series are issued at the present time that great care should be exercised in selecting for purchase. As a rule, it is not safe to buy whole sets of books, as different volumes vary greatly in merit.

Inexpensive reprints of standard books are published in many forms. One of the most useful of the cheap editions is Everyman's library, Dutton, cloth, 35 cents; leather, 70 cents. This includes a large number of books desirable for young people to read and is recommended to those who are forming a library of their own.

The Riverside literature series, Houghton Mifflin co., is made up of poems, stories, and essays from the world's best literature, ancient and modern, over 200 volumes in all. Paper, 15 cents each; linen, 25 cents.

The Heart of oak series contains tales of adventures, heroic stories, poems, classics from many languages chosen particularly with the aim of forming a taste for good literature. It was edited by Charles Eliot Norton, and published in seven volumes, graded according to age, by D. C. Heath & co. Per volume: Vol. 1, 25 cents; vol. 2, 35 cents; vol. 3, 40 cents; vol. 4, 45 cents; vol. 5, 50 cents; vol. 6, 55 cents; vol. 7, 60 cents.

Other series are noted in different parts of this list.

As guides to the best reading for young and old the following books are recommended: The choice of books, Frederick Harrison, 75 cents; The book lover, James Baldwin, 90 cents; Books and culture, Hamilton W. Mabie, 90 cents. Also aids in the selection of children's books: The children's reading, Frances J. Olcott, Houghton Mifflin co., $1.25; A mother's list of books for children, Gertrude W. Arnold, McClurg, $1.

I. PICTURE BOOKS AND STORIES FOR THE YOUNGEST READERS.

For very young children there is no better way than to tell over and over again the best fairy stories and myths, Old Testament stories, and simple hero tales.

Books adapted to the comprehension of young children are few and have usually no style to recommend them. Many of the books in other divisions of this list may be read to quite young children, but a few stories are placed here which a child can read almost as soon as he can read at all.

Adventures of a brownie. DINAH MULOCK CRAIK. Harper. 60 cents.
Æsop's fables.

There is a one-syllable edition, edited by Mary Godolphin. McKay. 50 cents.

Scudder's Book of fables is more pleasing in form, however, and the stories are chiefly from Æsop.

Another fairy reader. JAMES BALDWIN. Am. bk. co. 192 p. 35 cents.

In school book form. Contains folk lore of different countries, in large print for second grade children.

(The) Arabella and Araminta stories. GERTRUDE SMITH. Small. $1 net.

10. POETRY.

This list does not aim to do more than suggest a little of the good poetry which should be read by children of this age or read to them. Boys will be found especially fond of heroic poetry. "The revenge," by Tennyson, is almost faultless as a hero poem; Scott and Macauley are always loved. Children have very little comprehension yet of love or any of the more complex emotions. It is therefore only the earlier and simpler of the Arthurian legends which are adapted to their reading. It is well not to let feats of arms be the sole subject of heroic poetry. "The legend beautiful" and "The vision of Sir Launfal" are hero poems as well as "The charge of the light brigade."

In choosing poetry for memorizing the following pamphlet is helpful: A selected list of poems suitable to be learned by children. Selected by a committee of the Washington branch of the Association of collegiate alumnae. Press of W. F. Roberts, Washington, D. C. 25 cents.

Many of the general collections also will be found to contain poems within the comprehension of even young children. It is better to give them some great poetry which will be enjoyed for the rhythm and sound than to confine them to poems written for children.

The value of poetry in a child's life has been thus expressed:

"Rhythmic motion, or the flow of measured and beautiful sounds, harmonizes their differences, tunes them up to their tasks, disciplines their conduct, comforts their hurts, quiets their nerves; all this apart from the facts more or less important from the point of view of literature, that it cultivates their ear, improves their taste, and provides them a genuinely artistic pleasure." (McCLINTOCK: Literature in the elementary school.)
